Tasting notes

Color

Crystal clear

Taste

Pure and smooth. Hints of floral fields, herbs, juniper and liquorice. Edelweiss give the gin a subtle, lighter taste. Enjoy it in an extra-dry martini or sip it neatly with a glass of iced tonic water on the side. Garnish the tonic with fresh dill or berries.

Finish

Perfectly balanced in terms of ingredients and sweetness despite its alcohol volume. The Weisshorn Distillery Weisshorn Alpine Glacier Gin is hand-made in Chandolin, a charming little Swiss village in the Val d'Anniviers at an altitude of 2000 metres in the Weisshorn valley. The micro-distillery operates from a 19th-century wooden hut nestled in the mountains, at the edge of an alpine forest. A stream runs beneath the trees, and lower down, summer pastures support local grazing cattle. Each botanical is cold-distilled separately, then blended with soft, filtered glacier water to achieve optimal purity before bottling. The distillery runs entirely on hydroelectric power generated by nearby waterfalls.
