

GRAHAM'S NE OUBLIE 1882

135 Years Old Port Wine

A special release of 656 bottles of a Port that dates back to the arrival of Andrew James Symington in Portugal in 1882. Now 130 years later his direct descendants have bottled one of the remaining three barrels. This extraordinary wine has been bottled in an individually numbered, hand-made crystal decanter designed by Portugal's leading glass manufacturer Atlantis. Three sterling silver bands, molded and engraved by Scottish Silversmiths Hayward & Stott, and carrying the mark of the Edinburgh Assay Office, adorn the glass. The decanter is presented in a box handcrafted with the finest leathers by Smythson of Bond Street, one of the world's oldest luxury leather goods companies. Hence, Ne Oublie represents the work of the very finest artisans of the

Tasting notes