

BOWMORE 1997 / 24 YEARS OLD

Samaroli | Cask No.54 | 2021 Release

Independent bottler Samaroli presents a 24-year-old Islay single malt whisky from the Bowmore Distillery, matured in a single cask that previously held Sherry wines. Bowmore is one of the rare distilleries which still produces its own floor-malted barley, hand-turned by a traditional wooden malt shovel and hand-drawn machinery. Their whiskies are made according to time-honoured skills acquired over two centuries and are renowned for their distinctive smokiness.

Tasting notes

Aroma

Elegant and fragrant with rich tones of white chocolate that complement the mild peaty aromas of stove charcoal and toasted wood.

Taste

At 45% Vol, the palate offers an unusual, delicate peatiness. The ageing in sherry barrels rounds the flavours, amplifying the enveloping structure of the liquid.

Finish

Opulent & velvety with a long succulent aftertaste.

About Independent Bottler Samaroli: Samaroli is probably Italy's most renowned independent bottler, considered a visionary by most. Impeccable taste and an eye for aesthetics have given numerous of his bottlings a worthy place in the pantheon of whisky and rum giants. Today the production is under Antonio Bleve's direction, who has collaborated with Samaroli for many years and shares the passion and philosophy of the house. Antonio Bleve continues his quest for exceptional casks, relying on the brand's historical relationships and new interactions, making their latest bottlings increasingly in demand.
