

GLENALLACHIE 2009 / 12 YO

Samaroli | Cask No.900332 | 2021 Release

A Speyside single malt Scotch whisky from the Glenallachie distillery, released by the sought-after bottler Samaroli. This whisky was distilled in 2009, matured in a single cask and bottled in 2021. Only 470 bottles were released worldwide. Samaroli is probably Italy's most admired independent bottler of Scotch whisky, known for an impeccable taste for their single cask whiskies and aesthetics.

Tasting notes

Aroma

A robust, mineral and dynamic bouquet on the nose. A clear character and an iron temperament. Flavours of pear, nougat and oak.

Taste

On the palate, the first impression is metallic. In contrast to its very straightforward bouquet, lovely notes of pear and tropical fruit emerge, followed by honeyed oak, vanilla cream and pepper.

Finish

The finish expands in width and length, with a lingering dusty hold of leather, orange blossom and toasted oak notes.

About the Glenallachie Distillery The Glenallachie distillery was established by Mackinlay's in 1967 in order to meet the demand for their blends. During its short history, the distillery changed owners and passed through the hands of Invergordon Distillers and Pernod-Ricard. During this period, the focus was always on providing blends. Now it is in the hands of Billy Walker and has been pushed as a single malt brand since 2017. Before that time, it was only possible to taste Glenallachie through sought-after independent bottlings like this one.
